

Wavelength Interest Rate Neutral Fund

October 2018

Portfolio Commentary

- The portfolio generated a return of +0.18% in September, bringing returns for the third quarter to +1.69%
- Bonds faced further headwinds due to expectations for rising rates, and in this context the Barclays Global Aggregate Bond Index returned -0.86% during the month, bringing quarterly returns to -0.92%
- The fund's outperformance was driven by emerging market debt, which rebounded strongly to make the largest positive contribution, followed by corporate credit where spreads continued to tighten
- Upside was limited by negative contributions from government and inflation-linked bonds
- The strategy is positioned for changing expectations around inflation and growth, and seeks to profit as markets recalibrate to a new path for interest rates moving forward

PRINCIPAL RISKS:

The use of derivatives, forward and futures contracts, and commodities exposes the Fund to additional risks including increased volatility, lack of liquidity, and possible losses greater than the Fund's initial investment as well as increased transaction costs. Concentration generally will lead to greater price volatility.

This Fund enters into a short sale by selling a security it has borrowed. If the market price of a security increases after the Fund borrows the security, the Fund will suffer a potentially unlimited loss when it replaces the borrowed security at the higher price. Short sales also involve transaction and other costs that will reduce potential Fund gains and increase potential Fund losses. Diversification does not eliminate risk. An investor considering the Fund should be able to tolerate potentially wide price fluctuations. The Fund is subject to high portfolio turnover risk as a result of frequent trading, and thus, will incur a higher level of brokerage fees and commissions, and cause a higher level of tax liability to shareholders in the Fund. The Fund may attempt to increase its income or total return through the use of securities lending, and they may be subject to the possibility of additional loss as a result of this investment technique.

This Fund is a non-diversified fund. Because the fund may invest in securities of smaller numbers of issuers, the Fund may be more exposed to the risks associated with and developments affecting an individual issuer than a fund that invests more widely, which may, therefore, have a greater impact on the Fund's performance.

This Fund is not suitable for all investors.

Investors should carefully consider the investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses of the Fund before investing.
